GEORGE PEABODY.

The English Press on the Death of the Philanthropist—His Character and His Fame.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The death of the celebrated philanthropist, GEORGE PEABODY, has created a profound sensation. Nearly all the morning journals have obituary articles. That of the Times says:

"The news of Mr. PEABODY's death will be received with no common sorrow on both sides of the Atlantic. The sentiment of regret will not be a mere passing tribute of gratitude to a munificent benefactor. Mr. PEABODY, through a long life, accumulated manifold titles to be lamented. He was an ardent patriot, and loved abroad as much as at home. He was a New-Englander, who, when the South was bowed down to the dust, stepped forward and claimed the right to succor it. He was no courtier, yet he was honored by sovereigns and princes. He was profuse in his charity, which pauperized nobody. He was a philanthropist who was liked as well as honored. There was nothing hard or narrow about his philanthropy; he simply did whatever good came in his way."

The Post, in its obituary article, says: "Mr. PEABODY was one of the few whose private virtues are followed by public fame and whose virtues may be cited as examples. In laying the foundation of wholesome and cheerful homes for the working classes he acted upon a high sense of duty and touched the mainsprings of civilization. He made his means the measure of his philanthropy. Throughout his whole life his conduct displayed a purity of character that should not fail to elevate and refine the feelings his generosity inspired."

The Telegraph says: "Mr. PEABODY'S lot was doubly happy. The inscription on his mausoleum may tell with unquestioned truth of the man who loved his kind and served two countries."

GREAT BRITAIN.

A Holiday—Close of the Exchange—The Boat Races Between the Thames and Tyne Crews—Success of the Latter.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The political news today is not important. To-morrow will be recognized as a holiday in London, and the Exchange will not be open for business.

The Thames crew were the favorites at the start. The double race between these two crews will take place on the Tyne on the 19th inst.

A four-oared match, £200, has been arranged to take place on the Tyne, Nov. 17.

After the race on the Thames to-day SADLER, of the Thames crew, exasperated by his defeat, abominably abused and struck WALTER BROWN, the American oarsman. Friends interfered and prevented the quarrel from proceeding further.

If the American yachtsmen do not find a clear field on the ocean in the Spring, they will be hard to suit.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5.—The official report of the recent attack on the mail and the murder of Colonel STONE by the Indians at Apache Pass, Arizona, states that the attack was made after night, and was a complete surprise. The Indians were led by white men. The robbery of the mails was the principal object of the Indians, they having knowledge of greenbacks and facilities for disposing of them. After slaughtering the mail party, the Indians attacked a herd of cattle belonging to some Texas emigrants, stampeded 250 of the herd and killed one man of the party. They then twice attacked a Government train en route for Camp Bowie, but were repulsed. Troops from Camp Bowie have been sent in pursuit of the savages, who are making for Sonora.

Pike, the New-Hampshire Murderer—His Wishes Regarding the Execution.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 5.—PIKE, who is to be hanged here on Thursday for murder, makes a request which will probably be granted, that a quartet of young ladies in Concord who have often sung to him and other prisoners, be allowed to remain in his cell after he passes out for the last time, and sing while preparations to launch him into eternity are being concluded; that is, after the cap is drawn over his face, while the straps and ropes are being adjusted. He also requests that no relatives of his victims shall be admitted to witness his death.

Shocking Accident on the Hudson River Railroad—Serious Injuries to Several Persons.

From the Poughkeepsie Register, Oct. 21.

The greatest railroad case on record in our American Courts has not been decided, and for the last two days the lawyers have been busy dividing the large audience by them recruited among their numerous friends, most of whom we are glad to say belong to the numerous class of suitors and witnesses. Our readers remember that [illegible] 1868, the [illegible] Express train [illegible] Hudson River Railroad [illegible] Fishkill [illegible] Station, [illegible] of the early adoption of this measure of postal reform so universally desired by the people of the two generations [illegible]

Suicide of a Lunatic.

A lunatic named [illegible] committed suicide [illegible] by hanging himself [illegible] with a handkerchief [illegible] to the bedpost. [illegible] was discovered [illegible] by his wife, who [illegible] cut him down, [illegible] life was extinct. [illegible] was a native of [illegible] and was about [illegible] years of age. [illegible] was brought nearly $480,000. It is on this large amount that Judge BLEECKER has finally passed judgment, awarding to the salvors about $220,000, exclusive of near $50,000 in costs. The case was long and ably argued by Messrs. HAMILTONS, for the claimants, and by Messrs. JONES, ST. PAUL, GRANDIN and WALKER, for the libelants, and after protracted litigation, has finally been decided and the funds transferred to Mobile.

These funds are divided between nearly 180 salvors, and thus will greatly help, during the hard winter season, a most worthy class of our own citizens, and we feel satisfied that it will also greatly aid our banks in the handling of the crop, as most of it will soon find its way into their coffers.

The insurers were mainly English, only 240 bales being covered in New-York.

WASHINGTON.

The Sub-Committee on the South Carolina Election Contest—Rate of Travel from San Francisco to the Atlantic Cities—Tennessee Constitution—Reciprocity with Canada.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—The Sub-Committee on Elections, charged with the investigation of the South Carolina cases, met to-day, and after a statement of the condition of the House contingent fund, resolved to postpone their trip to that State until after the meeting of Congress, when they will lay before the House their reasons for not complying with their request.

FROM SAN FRANCISCO TO THE ATLANTIC.

The Post Office Department is keeping a register of the time occupied in the transmission of mails between San Francisco and the leading Eastern cities. The schedule time was materially shortened on the 10th ult., and since that date the average time between Boston and San Francisco has been seven days, nineteen hours and twenty-five minutes, with frequent trips made as low as seven days and four hours. The average time between New-York and San Francisco has been seven days, two hours and twenty-three minutes, with frequent trips in six days, fifteen hours and twenty minutes. The average time between Washington and San Francisco has been seven days, six hours and nine minutes, with one trip as quick as six days and fifteen hours. It is the intention to still further reduce the schedule time so as to bring the time between New-York and San Francisco down a half day on the average.

THE TENNESSEE LEGISLATURE.

The Tennessee Legislature has now under consideration a bill the subject of which is to fix the qualifications of voters in the coming election upon the question of calling a Constitutional Convention. The Franchise laws, as enacted by the Constitutional Convention of 1865, and the first Legislature convened under the new Constitution, still exist. These were practically annulled in the last canvass by Governor SENTER, but they are still laws binding upon the State. A bill passed the Lower House of the Assembly some days ago, which entirely annulled and disregarded these chance laws, by providing that every male resident, twenty-one years of age, and not convicted of crime, should be entitled to vote on the question of calling a Constitutional Convention and electing members thereto. This bill was earnestly opposed by the Stokes Republicans as revolutionary in its character, and as in direct conflict with the Constitution of the State. It passed the House, however, by a strict party vote, and the action of the Senate is awaited with interest. The movement is encouraged by ANDREW JOHNSON, and likely to provoke much ill-feeling. The Governor controls the registers, and under his appointees every man in the State would have voted in any event. Under such circumstances there was no necessity for such extreme action on the part of the Legislature, and it can only be accounted for on the ground of a desire on the part of JOHNSON and the Democrats to disregard and ignore the laws of former Legislatures.

NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE.

As a specimen of the enterprise of one of your contemporaries, it should be noted that it is now getting its Washington news from the TIMES, via Washington and Cincinnati. Thus, an internal revenue statement compiled from the TIMES, after its receipt here, telegraphed to Cincinnati and printed there, is reprinted by your contemporary as fresh news, while it had the same thing in your files in its own office.

THE CABINET.

The usual Cabinet meeting was convened at 12 o'clock, at which all the members were present.

CANADIAN RECIPROCITY.

Representative KELLEY, of Pennsylvania, had an audience of the President this evening in reference to Canadian reciprocity, and the proposal of the Dominion authorities to make with the United States a treaty somewhat similar to the one which was abrogated about two years ago. Mr. KELLEY has given this subject much study and consideration during the Summer, and made everything bearing on it a special study during a recent trip through the Northwest. He has arrived at the conclusion that the renewal of the treaty would be unwise and injurious to the United States. Two million and a half of dollars are, he says, paid to the Government as import duties on four articles alone. Mr. KELLEY will urge the President to refuse his sanction to any measure which may tend to disturb existing commercial relations between the two countries. The forthcoming report of the Commissioner of Pensions will show that the appropriation of last year, about $28,000,000, was barely sufficient to meet the claims which come before the Bureau. The pension list has not yet reached its maximum, and will probably continue to increase. At least $31,000,000 will be required next year.

PERSONAL.

Senator STEWART, of Nevada, will be here next week.

Among the visitors to the President to-day was Senator MORRILL, of Vermont.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

PUBLIC LANDS ENTERED DURING THE YEAR.

During the last fiscal year about 7,000,000 acres of public lands were entered under the Homestead and other laws, yielding the Government between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000.

SOLICITOR BANFIELD'S VISIT TO NEW-YORK.

It is stated the recent visit of Solicitor BANFIELD to New-York was, among other things, for the purpose of assisting in preparations for the prosecution of the parties arrested on the charge of being concerned in the counterfeiting and uttering of United States internal revenue stamps and Government securities.

APPOINTMENTS.

B. PLATT CARPENTER has been appointed Assessor of Internal Revenue for the Twelfth District of New-York.

JOSEPH H. FREEMAN has been appointed Postmaster at Lexington, Va., vice ROBERT CAMPBELL, suspended.

REDUCTION OF OCEAN POSTAGE PROBABLE.

From late intelligence received through Mr. THORNTON, the British Minister, it appears Her Majesty's Government is prepared to reduce the single rate of postage for prepaid letters between the United States and the United Kingdom to threepence. It will be remembered, Postmaster-General CRESWELL submitted a proposition to the British Post Office Department at the 4th ult. to reduce the latter rate of postage from twelve to six cents, to take effect on and after the 1st of January, 1870, of which two cents would be on postage, and five cents inland postage of each country. There is little doubt, therefore, of the early adoption of this measure of postal reform so universally desired by the people of the two generations [illegible]

EUROPEAN NEWS BY MAIL.

SPAIN.

What Followed the Fall of Valencia—Taking of Bejar—Jubilation in the Cortes—Speech of Prim—The Wanted Monarch.

Madrid (Oct. 20) Correspondence London Times.

The only other place which stood out when Valencia fell was Bejar, where the volunteers had proclaimed the Republic, and, in the absence of troops, had it all their own way for a time. No sooner, however, did they learn that a column was nearing them than they abandoned the place, and the troops were received with acclamation by the populace. One or two petty encounters with the scattered remains of the parties of PAUL and SALVOCHEA in Andalusia, and JOANISTI and SUNER in Catalonia, are recorded, with the usual result—defeat and dispersion. The whole of those four moving spirits of the insurrection have got off with whole skins, and are safe across the frontiers; the two former, with the fighting priest ROMERO, are in Gibraltar, and the two latter in France. The movements being thus considered at an end, the Gazette publishes a circular from General PRIM, giving the Regent's thanks to the Army for their "distinguished services" in the short campaign now over, "in which they have saved the national unity, and with it the great and permanent interests of Spanish society;" also promising to reward more substantially those who have performed special services, or, as the circular expresses it, "those who have had the good fortune to contribute more directly to save the nation from the horrors of anarchy." The Volunteers of Liberty "who placed themselves on the side of the Government to preserve order, and especially those whose patriotic impulses led them to join the campaign," are included in these thanks. Yesterday the Cortes were called together to pass a solemn vote of thanks, but the volunteers were singularly omitted from the proposition laid before them. It merely embraced the army and navy. Why the navy it is difficult to say, except because of their not having made a second pronunciamiento and joined the Republic, for the small services they performed in carrying troops and stores to Valencia, &c., and assisting the authorities at one or two coast towns to disarm the volunteers, scarcely entitled them to the thanks they would have received, and certainly merited, if the movement had been one in the suppression of which their particular branch of the service could have come into play. The navy, however, were included, and the volunteers left out. The omission was not discovered till after the proposer, Señor MORET, had made a long speech in support of the motion. It was not until General PRIM, in the course of a speech he made expressing his thanks to Señor MORET for the handsome compliments he had bestowed on the army, brought in the services of some of the volunteers, and especially Señor RIENCO's favorite Madrid battalion, the "Cazadores of Prim," who had gone to the theatre of operations, that the omission was noticed, and a proposal made by Señor CALDERON to include them. The original resolution was altered and read thus:

"The Cortes declare that the Army and Navy and the Volunteers of Liberty who have placed themselves by the side of the Government, have merited well of the country for the manner in which they have complied with their duties in the late insurrection."

In the course of his speech PRIM dwelt much on the important significance of the fact that "not one soldier or officer had joined the insurrection, but all had gone with enthusiastic ardor to join in its suppression." He was careful to use no expression which could be construed into denunciation of Republicanism itself. His silence on this point may or may not mean anything. There are rumors afloat that, having got rid, for a time at least, of the Republica Federal, he is not indisposed to throw himself into the arms of the Republica Unitaria. A speedy solution of the monarchical question is not brought about to his satisfaction. True it was that he avowed himself a Monarchist, but the gentle way in which he alluded to the Republicans was somewhat remarkable. He said the army had just ended two short campaigns—one against the Carlists, or absolutism; the other against the Republicans, or impatience.

The second had written 'impatience' on their banner, the desire of imposing the least on the most and of subjecting the majority to the will of the minority—a thing not written in any laws, and consequently they (the Federal Republicans) were as much Absolutists as the Carlists." He said that by all his traditions and political history he was a Monarchist;

"Such I was, such I am to-day, and such I will continue to be, and I will do all I possibly can for the Cortes speedily to name a monarch. Some have believed, or pretended to believe, that I have ideas quite apart from what I have just said, of bringing, once for all, not the monarchy, for that is already settled by the vote of the Cortes, but the monarch for our country. But the Deputies must understand that the great necessity of to-day is the consolidation of order in the nation, and not only of material order but of moral order also. Oh that we could say we had a candidate acceptable to all! To this we are going. This is the desire of the Government, this is what the country wants—that the dynasty founded here may have the immense majority of the Cortes Constituyentes on its side, for they represent the genuineness of the Revolution of September. The day we see we can accomplish this, that day will we carry to a head this great work—the crowning of the edifice raised by the revolution of September. I ought not to enter into more details on this point. I will limit myself to repeating that the Government have the same desire as beats in the hearts of all the Spaniards. Very speedily after the establishment of material and moral order, the Government will bring forward the question of the monarch. Without the Sovereign the work is imperfect. Let the Cortes remain tranquil. The President of the Council of Ministers will be the first to realise what he just has said, as soon as ever he can possibly do so."

With these promises of the "President of the Council of Ministers," not only the Cortes, but country must wait. There are hints that if the Government do not soon move in the matter, a knot of members in the Cortes intend to do so themselves by proposing a name, merely to test the feeling of the House. The "latest suggestion" is KEFARTERO to be KING for the remainder of his life, and to be succeeded by the Duke of GENOA, who is in the meantime to come to Spain, and put himself into training under the title of Prince of ASTURIAS!

FENIANISM.

The Latest Demonstration in London—Sympathy for the Fenian Convicts—Memorial to the Queen.

From the Pall Mall Gazette, Oct. 25.

The threatened demonstration in favor of amnesty to the Fenian convicts came off in London yesterday, and, as it happened not to rain, many thousands of persons congregated in the streets and in Hyde Park to see what was to be seen and to hear what was to be heard. From 12 o'clock to 2, Trafalgar-square was in possession of the sort of people who always muster in such numbers on the occasion of a Sunday public meeting. The new rather stale entertainment of parody on the Church service, gone through by a man in canonicals, served to amuse some hundreds of persons assembled round about the lions till the "demonstrators' proper made their appearance. Most of these distinguished themselves by wearing green scarves, green neckties, or green rosettes, and a young woman who headed the "ladies'" contingent was attired in green even to her gloves. After some time had been spent in marshalling the procession a start was made for Hyde Park. Banners were carried bearing various inscriptions; the favorite device was an Irish harp without the crown. Bands at intervals performed the "Marseillaise" and other revolutionary airs. The attempt to hold a public meeting in the Park was very much of a failure. The Reformers' Tree has been blown down, and the speakers had to stand as well as they could upon the prostrate trunk. Mr. J. J. MERRIMAN, who was President, made a long speech, in which he disclaimed any sympathy with Republicanism or Fenianism. Resolutions were passed in favor of releasing the Fenian convicts, and a memorial to the Queen was agreed to. The speaking at the tree was lame enough, but oratory of a more exciting kind was going on at some of the subsidiary meetings which were got together by speakers who held forth on their own account. One of these, an Englishman, and described as "well-dressed," is said to have dwelt upon the degradation and misery prevailing among the humble classes. He saw much, he said, of the Irish poor in the east end of London; and by ——, if he were one of them, he would rather see the whole of the aristocracy swept off the face of the earth than that one Irishwoman should die of starvation. Warming with the applause with which this sentiment was greeted, the speaker went on to say that Irish and English agitations were always failures, and he warned the people against them. Nothing would ever be done for Ireland except by English agitation. Let the English people agitate, and they would soon get their own rights, and then they would be able to help Ireland. Let them agitate for the abolition of the House of Lords, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the ballot, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Church, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Monarchy, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Aristocracy, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Standing Army, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Police, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Civil List, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Public Debt, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Income Tax, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Poor Rates, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Rent Charge, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Tithe Rent Charge, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Land Tax, and they would soon get it. Let them agitate for the abolition of the Property Tax

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

Hon. Stanley Matthews, of Ohio, and E. C. Camp, of Tennessee, were admitted to the bar.

Nos. 189 and 195.—The United States vs. Speed et al., and Same vs. Floyd.—Argument concluded.

No. 196.—The United States vs. George W. Lane.—Appeal from the Court of Claims.—Lane entered into two contracts with the Treasury Agent at Norfolk, N. C., one for the delivery of 1,000 bales of cotton, and one for 100 bales, which cotton was on the Chowan River, in North Carolina, and within the lines held by the insurrectionary forces. The commander of the Military District gave him safe conduct for himself, his vessel and crew, to bring out the cotton, and the Norfolk agent appointed a sub-agent, who went out as a quasi supercargo to take charge of the outward or cotton cargo, which consisted of 251 bales of cotton, delivered to the sub-agent on board the vessel by Lane. On the return voyage the vessel and cargo were seized by order of the naval commander on duty in the inland waters of North Carolina, detained several days, and then released, to be again seized before arriving at Norfolk by order of Admiral Porter. After detention from the 9th of January until the beginning of March, 1865, they were turned over to the Treasury Agent at Newbern as captured or abandoned property. The cotton was forwarded by the Secretary of the Treasury, the cotton was sent to New-York and the vessel to Washington. The latter was libeled in the Supreme Court of the District, and restored to the claimant in favor of Lane, subsequently the cotton was restored to Lane, at New-York, by order of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The Court of Claims held the capture and detention unlawful, unauthorized by the Government, and rendered judgment in favor of Lane for loss sustained by the fall in the price of cotton before the restoration to him for $31,626 40. The Government appeals, claiming that the voyage upon which the capture was made was a violation of law, and the contracts privileged, and the contracts found by the Court of Claims to have been made were illegal; and that the seizure by the military power was proper, and there is no legal cause of complaint. It is argued that, as the United States never contracted with the claimant that its naval vessels would not seize and detain his vessel, the Court has no jurisdiction to enforce the contract which the Court of Claims has jurisdiction to enforce. The safe conduct alleged was not a contract of the United States. The Government does not contract that it will not exercise its sovereign powers, legislative, executive, judicial and executive, by means of a contract made by one of its agents, even though such agent had authority to make it. No implied contract arises from the mere fact of the agent's appointment. But the agent whose authority is relied on in the case had no authority to bind the Government in the manner claimed. Every contract, to be valid, made by the United States, must be made by some officer clothed with special authority to make it. The claimant insists that the acts and contracts of the agent were the acts and contracts of the United States, and that the judgment for the claimant of the Prize Court of the District of Columbia, on the subject of the vessel bearing the cotton, is conclusive upon all the world, and estops the United States from calling in question the legality and regularity of the voyage. It was a judgment of a Court of competent and exclusive jurisdiction and cannot be questioned.

Mr. Clark, Assistant Attorney-General, for the United States; T. J. D. Fuller, for the claimant.

In the Supreme Court to-day the case of the schooner Lady vs. United States was argued on a motion to dismiss the appeal for want of jurisdiction.

No. 6 original. The State of Texas vs. White, Chiles et al.—This cause was also again before the Court on a motion to perfect the decree made by the State, it having been left imperfect in respects certain points involved. The principal question was as to the effect of the payment of thirty-four Texas indemnity bonds, held by Hardenburgh, one of the defendants, before the service of process upon him in this case, such payment having been preceded by the deposit of a large amount of United States seven-thirty bonds in the hands of R. W. Taylor, as indemnity to Secretary McCulloch against any personal loss, damage or expense in which he might be involved by reason of the payment. The State seeks to have the decree so framed as to defeat Hardenburgh's claims.

Messrs. Ingersoll and Merrick for the State and Messrs. Carlisle and Evarts for the defendants.

A motion is also submitted by Judge Hughes asking a rehearing of the case, it being alleged that the contract between the rebel authorities and the defendants, found to have been null and void by the Court, has since been recognized by the loyal States as now existing by the release of the securities of White & Chiles in their bond for its execution. The December Term of 1868, not yet reached, it is insisted that the motion is in order.

The Chief Justice announced that the Court would hereafter meet at 12 M., instead of 11 o'clock.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—SOUTHERN DISTRICT.

Before Judge Blatchford.

MECHANICS' LIENS IN NEW-JERSEY—WHEN LIEN MUST EXIST TO BE RECOGNIZED IN BANKRUPTCY.

In the matter of James R. Dey, a bankrupt.—This case came before the Court on testimony taken under an order of reference on a petition presented to the Court by the assignee in bankruptcy, asking for a determination as to the claims of certain mortgagees, and as to the validity of certain alleged liens claimed as mechanics' liens, under the laws of New-Jersey, on certain real estate, and the proceeds thereof, situated on the Hackensack River, in New-Jersey, and owned by the bankrupt. There being on the evidence no question as to the validity of the mortgage liens, as against the assignee, the only point to be determined by the Court was as to the alleged mechanics' liens. The petition in bankruptcy was filed on a voluntary application, and was filed May 17, 1869. The earliest claim of mechanic's lien filed under the law of New-Jersey was filed May 20, 1868. The work was done and the materials furnished in the year 1867, which the liens are alleged prior to May 17, 1868. It is contended on the part of the assignee that no lien had attached to the property in question at the time of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy. The question was whether under the lien law of New-Jersey the lien attached when the work was done, or not until the claim of lien was filed.

Held by the Court—That it is not the intention of the Mechanics' Lien law of New-Jersey (Revised Statutes, p. 367, second edition) that the mere filing of a claim for the furnishing of the materials shall of itself create a lien, but that the lien attaches when the work is done and the labor performed. The meaning of the statute is that the mechanic shall only have a right to the benefit of such lien when he shall have filed his claim for the same within the time specified in the statute. The lien is not created by the filing of the claim, but by the doing of the work and furnishing the materials. The filing of the claim is only necessary to preserve the lien already created. The meaning of the statute is that the mechanic shall only have a right to the benefit of such lien when he shall have filed his claim for the same within the time specified in the statute. The lien is not created by the filing of the claim, but by the doing of the work and furnishing the materials. The filing of the claim is only necessary to preserve the lien already created.

Held by the Court—That the extra purchase of United States 5-20s at noon yesterday. The calculation was indulged that an extra $5,000,000 Gold bids might be accepted at noon to-day. There was no good reason why such a mistake should have been indulged, but it led, nevertheless, to numerous bids for Gold at low figures, in all $4,768,000, while the award was confined to the usual million of dollars sold on Fridays. The award was in the single round sum of $1,000,000 at 136.76 ℔ cent. on the bid of Messrs. DURANT & EARL. The other $3,768,000 bids ran from 136.99 to 136.50 ℔ cent., the average about 136½ ℔ cent.

The subsequent open market for Gold acted somewhat singularly for half an hour or so, sales at 137, then at 136½@¼, and again up to 137 ℔ cent. The purchase of the $1,000,000 from the Treasury by a single house, and the large amount bid for at lower figures, created the impression that the market had touched bottom for the present, but this feeling was not strong enough to carry up the price above 137¼ ℔ cent. to the close of regular 'Change hours. The Foreign Exchanges were steady on the basis of 108¾@108¾ for first-class Bankers' on London 60 days. There is a fair business doing, but the demand seems to be readily met at the going rates, owing to the ease with which the leading drawers are able to cover their accounts with cheaper Bills from the South, or with Merchant Bills drawn from New-York. The sight rate on London is 109¼@¼; on Paris, 5f. 15c.@5f. 13½c. to the dollar, and 60-days Paris, 5f. 17½c.@5f. 16½c. to the dollar.

The Public Funds further improved ½@¼ ℔ cent. to-day on nearly all the Gold-bearing Bonds. The offerings on the Street are not so free since the extra purchase of $1,000,000 by the Treasury yesterday. Late in the day the 5-20s of 1867 were quoted 116 ℔ cent., and the other issues in proportion. The bearish feeling on the part of some of the prominent dealers has not been given over, but is less strongly indulged than through the early days of the week. The Southern State Bonds were weak on the North Carolina "Specials," which, from 43@44 a few days since, have gone back to 41@40 ℔ cent. In other descriptions there was not much business done. In the Railway market the bullish disposition in some of the Western lines and in Reading, noticed yesterday, gained strength in the Long Room, after the adjournment of the early Board, and the business was quite animated in Lake Shore, Northwest, St. Paul and Reading, rather higher prices being made on the sales than were sustained later in the day, except in the case of Reading, which kept up to near the close of business. In the New-York Vanderbilt Stocks the transactions were small. Hudson was lower than yesterday, and Central steady.

After the late Boards the following quotations were made as compared with Thursday night. After regular hours the sales of gold were advanced to 137¾@137¾ ℔ cent.:

The Mark Lane Express, of Oct. 25, says: "The week opened with fierce winds and heavy rains, and closed foggy and cold. The month hitherto, like every season of this remarkable year, has given us a renewed taste of Summer and unmistakable signs of approaching Winter. We can, therefore, no longer depend on the growth of vegetation, and we are reminded of the possibility at the closing of the Baltic and other places. It would, indeed, be welcome news to holders in the prospect plenty of forestalment. But even reflected this, the business has, as it, anticipated, has exhibited a rising confidence, and with our general average down to 49 ℔ quarter, a fixed import and exports charges only about 4s. 6d. ℔ quarter, leaving 6s. ℔ quarter to be paid for freight, insurance, with the chance that fair wheat may be had at 40s. ℔ quarter, or 8s. ℔ cental, delivered at Liverpool, or 44s. ℔ quarter, or 8s. 8d. ℔ cental, delivered at London. Such prices, however, have scarcely any fair to keep is sufficiently plain to all who have tried them, and though their rapid decline is not felt much just now, it must eventually tell upon the country. We are, therefore, becoming more seriously deficient in farinaceous food; while the meat market, already high enough, threatens us with a further rise. All this occurring at a time when such anxieties are out of enquiry is no slight matter, and although we are neither alarmists ourselves, nor wish in any way to spread the feeling, a caution against all manner of waste seems not untimely. Prices have advanced fully 1s. per quarter, and in foreign countries there are many markets equally improved. France is about 1s@2s. dearer; Belgium is slowly following her; Hamburg, Stettin and Rostock are 1s. per quarter dearer, and though Hungary, the Italian States, and Odessa continue in calm, the fact that France and England show improved prices will soon have their influence in these places. But the first improvement came from the very quarter where most was feared. Flour has gone up at New-York 1s. per barrel, and Wheat in proportion, and as the cool weather may bring an early Winter in the States, we may find ourselves suddenly left to what the Mediterranean can do, while the Black Sea and the Azof will be shut up till the Spring. These considerations following the present turn in the trade may induce our own growers, or the richest of them, to wait for better times. The arrivals off the coast since the 15th of October were twenty-nine cargoes, of which sixteen were wheat, nine maize, two barley, one rye and one beans."

From the twenty-first annual report of the Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Exchange of Cincinnati for the commercial year ending Aug. 31, 1869, just issued, we extract the following comparison of the receipts and exports of leading articles at that point during the past year with those of 1868:

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD FIRST MORTGAGE THIRTY-YEAR SEVEN PER CENT. BONDS.—The railroad connecting Louisville and Nashville, Ky., is, with its branches, 367 miles in length. The cost of the road and equipment has been $15,386,000. Its bonded debt is but $2,364,000. Its stock pays eight per cent. dividends, and the Company has never failed to meet all liabilities at maturity.

The road has been in successful operation many years, and is doing a large and steadily increasing business. The income account for the fiscal year ending 30th of June, 1869, stands: Gross Earnings, $2,381,138 55; Expenses, $1,349,461 79; Net Earnings, $1,031,676 76. The INCREASED EARNINGS of July, August and September, 1869, over those of the corresponding months of 1868, were $161,713 47.

To obtain funds for purchasing other lines which will add largely to the value of its entire property, and to retire the present indebtedness of $2,364,000 at maturity, the Company has executed a mortgage to James Punnett and Junius B. Alexander, of the City of New-York, as Trustees, upon its entire lines of road, with all its rolling stock, property, franchise and income, to secure the prompt payment of its bonds for eight million dollars. These bonds are for one thousand dollars each, payable thirty years from 1st of April, 1868, and bear seven per cent. interest. The coupons are payable April and October at the Bank of America, in New-York.

These bonds are a first mortgage upon the present road, which has cost over Fifteen Million Dollars, and whose net earnings are now double the entire interest obligation it would assume.

The mortgage will be for an unusually small proportion of the value or income of the property, and we therefore unqualifiedly recommend these bonds to investors as in all respects a first-class security.

It is the purpose of the Company to issue, at present, only a small portion of its bonds secured under this mortgage, which we are now authorized to sell, in lots to suit purchasers, at ninety and accrued interest.

Liquor Laws in Politics.

Tuesday's elections show that the prohibitionists people made good their threat to have a hand in State politics whenever they could; and their work is visible from Massachusetts to Minnesota. So far, however, as can now be seen, their main achievement has been to damage their own cause. In the two States just mentioned they made a very poor show, and in the former, where they once controlled the Legislature by an overwhelming vote, they have now lost it by a majority equally overwhelming.

The policy of the prohibitionists has been at once grasping, inconsiderate and short-sighted. They have clamored everywhere to have the single issue—and that a moral one—which they present, raised above the great fundamental political principles on which the two great parties of the country are organized. They have not even been content to take from these parties a general declaration of sympathy with any movement for true temperance, allowing every member of the party to exercise his own discretion as to the proper means for the progress of temperance. They have sought, rather, to commit political Conventions to the support of their extremest measure; to allow no latitude of judgment; to read out of the ranks any person, no matter how hard a worker and honest a thinker on all other questions, whose ideas on this subject did not square with their own. A man in favor of the strictest sort of license law was to be anathematized. And, in demanding these things, under all sorts of threats of "bolting," and supporting those prohibitionists have never minced their words. By one of these curious contrasts we often see in politics, the special advocates of so-called "temperance" have furnished the most "frightful examples" of intemperance in language and conduct.

The result has been thus far, as we have said, that many people have violently opposed the prohibition movement, who, had it taken another form, would have suffered it to run its chances. It has secured the hatred of many who cannot submit to see all other interests sacrificed to this. That it should gradually have lost ground, even in Massachusetts, which would naturally give it something of a welcome and support, is not wonderful when the persistency of its assumptions is considered.

If the friends of the temperance issue have learned wisdom by experience, they will hereafter content themselves with less than they have been accustomed to demand. Instead of trying to force the question on parties formed for different purposes, and instead of trying to break up those parties by reason of their unwillingness to have that dogma introduced as an article of general party faith, they will seek simply to throw their influence in behalf of friends of temperance in local elections, choosing, as between any two candidates, the one whom they consider to be the best man.

The Removal of the Capital.

Nothing could indicate more clearly the existing scarcity of topics in the political world than the agitation going on in the West about the removal of the national capital from Washington to the centre of the continent. The arguments, too, are worth study, as specimens of the ingenious way in which men often manage to work themselves in dull times into a state of excitement. The principal one is, of course, that the circumstances of the country have totally changed since Washington was fixed upon as the seat of Government, and that the centre of population as well as of wealth is no longer, or will very soon be no longer, on the sea-board but in the Mississippi Valley. But then it is not at all likely that either political influence or the greatest density of population will be found forever in any part of the Union in particular. The tides both of influence and population ebb often from one century to another in every country. The north of England was, as compared to the south, a howling wilderness, and Liverpool a fishing village, little over a century ago. Since then Lancashire has become the great centre of English industry, Liverpool almost the greatest port of the Kingdom; while the south-western counties, with their great port of Bristol, have sunk into insignificance. Scotland, too, from being a country of beggarly nobles and half-starved peasantry, has, within the same period, risen into the first rank both in manufactures and agriculture. On the European continent the changes have been no less remarkable. Genoa and Venice, once first-class emporia, have within two centuries sunk into total insignificance, and make a beggarly exhibit of vacant wharves, which once groaned under the merchandise of the whole eastern world. Trieste has, in the meantime, risen rapidly into a first-class position, and is absorbing more and more of the trade of the Mediterranean; and it is not impossible that a very few years may see Constantinople, owing to the extension of railways in the European provinces of Turkey, restored to the proud position as a commercial city which it once enjoyed, and for which its position clearly marks it out. We might multiply these illustrations to any extent. There is no quarter of the globe in which population, commerce, industry and wealth are not shifting constantly from one place to another. In our own country here as it is there, enough has occurred already to warn us of the folly of making plans for the remote future. Compare the relations of New-England to the rest of the country to-day, to what they were fifty years ago. Compare the relation of New-York to Boston or Philadelphia with what it was fifty years ago. Look at the present condition of New-London and Salem, and think of what it was within the memory of men still living. We all know what the present condition of the Southern States and their seaports is now; but who is the man so bold as to say what it will be after half a century of free labor? Who will venture to assert positively that with their soil and climate, and other natural advantages, those States will not before the close of another century have drawn the weight of population and of wealth away from the Northwestern States completely? And what human being can tell what influence the Pacific slope is going to exercise on the material fortunes of the Eastern States? In short, look in what direction we may, we find abundant proof of the folly of attempting to decide now where either the commercial or political headquarters of the United States ought to be, even if we concede that the capital ought to be wherever there are most voters, and even if it were important, as regards accessibility, where the capital should be in these days of railroads and telegraphs.

The probabilities are that if the capital were now shifted in order to meet the change in the circumstances of the country, it would have to be shifted again for the same reason in fifty or sixty years more. Besides this, nothing is more certain than that the process of shifting the capital would be found enormously profitable by a large army of very shrewd and energetic persons, and, once begun, we might trust to them to keep it up. The question of a change in the capital would come up in every Presidential canvass, and would form a plank in every platform. Each State, with any pretensions to the honor of having the seat of government within its border, would have its lobby at Washington working for it, and its pledged delegates in all the conventions.

Who knows, indeed, but the capital would eventually become a portion of "the spoils," and the victorious party claim the right of fixing its site during its term of office. Should this come to pass, the propriety and advantage of mounting the White House, the Capitol and the various Departments on wheels, like traveling menageries, or photographic vans, and having them drawn from place to place by Government mules, would soon be apparent to everybody.

One reason for moving it from Washington, urged strongly at a recent meeting, ought not to be passed over without notice, namely: that in its present position the difficulty and expense of defending it in time of war would be very great. Considering that the population of the United States will probably number 100,000,000 by the end of the century; that they will have no enemies on this side of the Atlantic Ocean, and will be able to put on foot the largest army and navy in the world, the propriety of stowing away the capital in the interior to save it from invaders is not apparent at first sight. If we have to do this with Washington, we ought to do it with New-York and Boston and Philadelphia, and, indeed, leave a barren strip along the coast, so as to embarrass the enemy, and leave him nothing to plunder when he lands, as the Mediævals did when the Danes were ravaging their territory. There is nothing like taking precautions in time, particularly when one is weak and timid. But it seems to us if the American people cannot defend its capital on the Atlantic coast, it will hardly defend it anywhere, and the ruthless spoiler will pursue our Government even to St. Louis, and send Congressmen in chains down the river to New-Orleans.

The Brooklyn Democracy.

The Democracy of Kings County are playing a desperate and shameless game. They chose their own partisans for election officers last Tuesday, and manipulated the ballot boxes with a characteristic indifference to the rights of Republicans and the decencies of a political contest. By downright fraud they "counted out" GOODRICH and AMMERMAN, who had been elected to the Assembly, and MCLEER, of whose election as Street Commissioner there was no reasonable doubt. The canvassers were Democratic; there was no check upon their counting; and they were free to manufacture majorities to suit their convenience. The fact is a strange commentary upon the forms of an election and the rights of the electors, as understood in Brooklyn. It shows with what effrontery the Democracy there carried out their purposes, and how worthless is the recorded general result of Tuesday's contest as an expression of honest public opinion in Kings County.

But the game as thus far played has been unsuccessful in one particular. ANTHONY WALTER has been elected Sheriff by a large majority. There is no doubt of that fact. Notwithstanding all their figuring, the Democratic officials have been compelled to concede him a majority of 1,300. The most ingenious counting in behalf of CUNNINGHAM, the candidate of the Ring, failed to make him the winner. WALTER is lawfully the Sheriff elect. The Ring, however, is not prepared to give up the case, and its friends openly boast that CUNNINGHAM will yet be the man.

Now there is only one way in which this purpose of the Democratic managers can be accomplished. Three districts, indeed, remain in which the ballots are to be canvassed; and with Ring canvassers little difficulty will be experienced in reducing WALTER'S majority. But by no conceivable manipulation can CUNNINGHAM gain more than 500 in the three districts in question; so that WALTER will still have a majority of several hundreds. This can be overcome by but one course. The returns for all other districts are now in the hands of the County Clerk, duly sealed, and purporting to have been duly counted. It is not pretended that error has been committed,—or rather no such pretence was heard until the necessity for some extraordinary step to secure CUNNINGHAM'S election became apparent. If, then, WALTER'S] majority is to be set aside, these returns—already declared perfect—must be reopened by the agents of the Ring and reconstructed to meet the emergency. With the figures thus at their command, and with unrestrained control of the returns, they will have no difficulty in bringing out any result which partisan necessities may seem to require. The Sheriff must be the creature of the Ring: this, at least, is decreed, and with the help of fraud and perjury, the rest will be comparatively easy.

The programme may, to the uninitiated, appear too criminal and scandalous to be possible. It renders an election in Kings County worse than a farce, and is suggestive of contingencies in which the alternative may be despotism or anarchy. But it harmonizes with what the Democracy have already done, and indicates the only method by which the people's preference for WALTER may be frustrated.

Contracts in Confederate Currency.

We noted the other day the remarkable decision of Chief Justice CHASE concerning the validity of contracts made in Confederate currency—whether such contracts could be enforced in the Courts of the United States and, if so, whether the contracts were payable in Confederate Treasury notes (which are now cheap) or in United States money. The pith of the decision was, first, that such contracts can be so enforced; second, that evidence can be received to prove that a promise expressed to be for the payment of dollars could be in fact for the payment of some other than lawful dollars of the United States, and that claims of this sort should be settled on the basis of the actual value represented by the currency of the Confederate States, at the time and place of each separate contract.

The commercial importance of this decision is, of course, evident; but it has a political importance in view of the grounds on which it was rested, namely, the nature of the Confederate States, and the definition of what they were. What we now have to suggest is that, in future decisions of this sort, some of the other members of the Court should give us the benefit of the opinions. It is very noteworthy that nearly all the late decisions in the Supreme Court involving questions of political doctrine, as briefly regarding the Confederacy, have been delivered by Chief Justice CHASE. It is also very noteworthy that in but few instances have dissenting or associate opinions been given by the other Judges. Now, we can conceive of the Court's agreeing on the conclusion regarding any particular suit, but we cannot conceive all members of it as agreeing on the train of reasoning whereby that conclusion was reached, or rather, on the precise expressions used by the Chief Justice, especially where the case involves the question of secession. We repeat, therefore, that it would be instructive to the public to hear from the other Judges, occasionally, their individual views on this class of questions.

Ocean Steam Lines.

In one respect, at least, it is mortifying to compare the New-York of 1860 with the New-York of to-day—we refer to the condition of our mercantile marine. Then, American ships and American seamen were famous the world over; our wharves were crowded with ocean packets and ocean steamers, bearing the American flag, and the transatlantic lines established by our merchants were famous for speed, comfort, convenience and general desirability.

We all know what has taken place within the last eight years. French, English, German—any sort of ships but American—have wrested from us our hardly-earned ocean carrying trade. "Fifteen years ago," once wrote Admiral PORTER, "no Frenchman was considered competent to run the engines of a steamship; and although two of three lumbering old French craft made voyages to and fro across the Atlantic, yet they met with so many mishaps, were so slow and so badly conducted, that they received few passengers and but little freight. How is it now? The moment we ceased our competition with the English, the French took our places, and by their success have proved how much we yielded when our steamers gave up the contest. At this moment the French are contesting every inch of ground with the British, equaling, if not exceeding the latter in the speed of their steamers, and surpassing them in all the conveniences and comforts of sea life."

In another column we present a letter on the ocean steam navigation of Liverpool, London and New-York. Comparisons like those there set forth are indeed "odious;" but if the chagrin they cause only serves to stir up our merchants, and especially our legislators, to the need of unhampering our commercial marine, and giving it "free course" once more, they will have served a good purpose. The history of the Cunard, the Inman, the National, and the Liverpool and Great Western (or WILLIAMS & GUION) lines, between New-York and Liverpool, points its own moral for merchants and shipowners. The great modern invention of screw propulsion has revolutionized ocean transportation, and it only remains for our countrymen to look the situation fully in the face. The screw has driven the sail, and is fast driving the paddlewheel, from the ocean in the quick passenger and freight lines; the time will come when it will monopolize the field.

The duty of our own City, and the duty of Congress are clear. The time will soon be at hand when, with the India trade and the American trade from both continents growing rapidly in New-York, the City must compete more successfully for ocean steam lines—lines to carry cargo to Europe, and to bring emigrants and freight back. But we all know what the trouble is—the difficulties and expense of shipbuilding in our own yards, and the stringent Registry laws which prevent American enterprise from working in foreign-built ships. Our correspondent declares with earnestness, as his solution of the question, "The cry that the dignity of the country will suffer if its citizens are permitted to build or purchase steamers abroad is sheer folly. The maritime dignity and power of the United States will rise with every accession of first-class ocean steamships to its mercantile marine. If all the steamers now plying between the United States and Europe could be transferred to citizens of the United States to-morrow, and henceforth sail under the flag of the United States, and under the command of citizens of the United States, the country would be a great gainer, both in profit and prestige." We may add that, in the opinion of many merchants, Congress would do well at its next session to repeal the Registry law, or to so modify it that we can buy the best Clyde-built vessels for new ocean steam lines. As it is now, our duties on articles used in shipbuilding are so high that foreign builders can furnish foreign lines with vessels at far lower prices than our builders can furnish similar ones to our own merchants.

Certain it is, at all events, that we ought now to strike for a share of the carrying trade of which we have been deprived, and that emigrant transportation will continue to enrich British shipowners until our Registry law is modified.

The World is in an ecstasy over the Democratic triumph. "It enables us," it cries, "to repeal all the odious and unjust laws" which the Republicans passed. "It insures the restoration of local self-government in our large cities"—founded on the beautiful model of New-York City. "It is the knell of the Registry law, the Sunday Liquor law, and the whole catalogue of oppressive statutes," &c. In short, "down with everything" is the motto of the World. Let us begin all over again, and have local Governments based on the straightforward principles of bribery, peculation and corruption. The rural classes used to say that the City Republicans were responsible for all the mischief done by the Democrats. We hope they understand clearly by this time that they, and they alone, have been the cause of our losing one of the grandest opportunities we have had in many years.

The cost of investigations in election cases has long been a subject of complaint, and with good reason. It appears that the Louisiana investigation alone will entail a charge upon the Government of $20,000. The Chairman of the Committee appointed to inquire into the Fourth Ward case says the case is reduced to a question of some ready money. The assigned reason was exhausting, and he does not care to "raise," as he says he is known to be short of cash at both prices. [illegible] the country are also [illegible] of whom [illegible] cost. Most of them, in their opinion, are guilty of nearly every crime. One person, charged at examination before a magistrate, ought to stop the inquiries and refrain from sanctioning investigations unless in very special cases. Nobody can expect to see any practical benefit accrue from the expenditure of over $60,000 in Louisiana.

The address from Father HYACINTHE, which is intended to introduce a volume of his sermons to the American public, will stir many hearts by the warmth and devoutness of its aspirations. There is a tone of deep sorrow in the passages bearing upon the Father's differences with his ecclesiastical superiors, while this sentiment does not restrain him from once more repeating his "protest against the excesses which dishonor it (the Roman Church) and seem bent upon its ruin." The rapt enthusiasm which first gave this great priest his influence over even the most careless and indifferent, shines forth in that whole passage in which he prefigures the ultimate union of the Roman Church and the Churches of the Reformation—a combination "which shall be the Church of the past in its original purity and beauty; but shall have besides the depth of its analysis, the breadth of its synthesis, the experience of its toils, its struggles and its griefs through all these centuries." The fire which burned in the hearts of the most memorable reformers of history animates Father HYACINTHE, and will yet compel him to do a work which will live after him.

The value of the numerous associations of visionaries which are started in the present age is very well illustrated in the proceedings of a "Social Reform" Society, held in this City. One of the speakers complained of the entire political system of the country. "He would have a new Constitution for the United States. The present one was a mistake." So far all is clear; now for the speaker's suggestions: "He was unable to give any definite idea of what should take its place." Exactly; it is so much easier to pull down than to build up. People who are dissatisfied with the present form of government show themselves somewhat at a loss when they attempt to devise a better.

Mr. PEABODY, as the cable informs us, died at "his residence in Eaton-square." It was one of the peculiarities of Mr. PEABODY that he never would have a house of his own. He cared little for himself in all things—it was his habit, for instance, to dine off a mutton chop at the grand dinners he used to give, where every luxury was spread upon the table. He had a room in the house of his old friend, Sir CURTIS M. LAMPSON, in Eaton-square, and it was there that he died. He used to live there in the most quiet and retired manner, and his name did not appear in any directory or "Court Guide." He has suffered much during the last four years, and could very seldom be induced to call in a doctor; when he did he neither obeyed the doctor's orders nor took his medicine. As one of his physicians complained a short time ago, Mr. PEABODY was a "most unsatisfactory" patient. He hated to be asked after his health, or to have any fuss made over him. He will, no doubt, be buried in Danvers, Mass.—that, at least, was the wish he often expressed in his lifetime. We may add that the statue of Mr. PEABODY, recently set up in the Royal Exchange, London, has given satisfaction to everybody, except the Saturday Review. The attack of that journal upon it was lately reprinted in these columns. The sculptor is an American—quite sufficient to account for the sneers of the Saturday.

When Saints quarrel the unregenerated may be excused for letting their angry passions rise. The community at Utah are behaving no better than the wicked. Schisms of portentous dimensions have appeared, and the elders have been moved to testify their devotion to liberty by suppressing a newspaper. Mr. COLFAX'S speech was like a stone thrown into a pond—the ripples extend to every part. He set some people thinking, and Mormonism will not bear thinking about. Lately one Saint fell upon another with cruel blows and much profane language. Internal divisions already threaten to do more to uproot the polygamists than outward opposition.

Undeniably the land question makes progress in England. Here is the least generous of all the English papers admitting that the leases generally accorded to Irish tenants are oppressive in their character, and cause the soil to be wasted, while condemning the poorer inhabitants to "a wretched, uncertain, profitless life." Six months ago the journal in question would have bitterly denounced any one who had dared to make this statement. Professor FAWCETT (the blind member of Parliament) has promised his constituents that a land bill for England shall be introduced as soon as the Irish measure is safely carried. Nothing can prevent this. "Let us," says Mr. FAWCETT, "abolish the present law of primogeniture; let us remove the present restrictions on the power of selling land." Public opinion in England is ripening for these reforms. In all probability the present Prime Minister will remain long enough in office to carry them all through.

The Café California, of Paris, has, for some years, dispensed to the poor of that city good cooked meat at two cents per plate, and of an inferior quality as low as one cent. An enterprising importer of Australian preserved beef is about to repeat the experiment in London. He promises to furnish a meat dinner, "well cooked savory and nutritious," with the addition of potatoes, at the same very moderate figure. Any one luxuriously inclined may preface this repast by a plate of soup with bread, which is also to be furnished for two cents. If, with such advantages, London cannot preserve her laboring poor from misery and want, there must be something materially wrong in the entire structure of society, as well as in the general distribution of wealth.

The Chamber of Commerce report on the frauds and corruptions in the management of our State Canals, only reiterates an old story, but it is one that must not be forgotten. The indifference of the Canal Board and the Legislature has long been well understood. The contract system is wasteful to the last degree, and utterly fails to increase the canal-carrying resources, and losses are entailed every year upon the grain trade by delays. But this just suits the railway monopolists. It is their interest to have the canals unserviceable, and so far their influence seems paramount. Nor, in spite of whatever the Chamber of Commerce may say or do, is there much apparent chance of a reform. Still, it is something to protest against the present corrupt system of management.

The delegation of the Friends appointed to visit the Indian tribes, have offered some very sensible suggestions for the future government of the Redskins, and others which seem a little doubtful. They would have all engagements made with Indians faithfully carried out—a course which alone would have prevented many an Indian war. They would allow the Indians [illegible] funds only to be applied and disbursed [illegible]. They would have "white light, ale and chemistry" in Indian lodges, and teach the young to speak English, and distribute tools and farms liberally among them." Is not this trying at too much? If an Indian prefers a lodge of his own making to the model one which the Friends would build, no one can force him to alter his tastes. The Government has already enough on its hands without undertaking to carry out costly experiments in civilization. But the suggestions of the Friends are well and kindly meant, and deserve to be considered with respect.

Rumors are again current regarding the possibility of a general European disarmament. This time it is the Emperor NAPOLEON who is reported as having taken the initiative in so desirable a movement. The finances of the Great Powers have for some time been seriously affected by their enormous war expenditure. The expense of an armed peace may be inferred from the fact that the present annual expenditure on European military establishments amounts to $626,000,000 in gold. The annual interest payable on their war debts amounts to $324,000,000 more. Exclusive of reserves, the number of men maintained on a war footing is 2,800,000, and the loss entailed by the withdrawal of such a force from productive labor has been estimated at $1,000,000 per day. Prussia is understood to be the main obstacle to a general reduction of warlike establishments; but as the thrifty Germans are beginning to look somewhat aghast at the proportions of the debt, amounting to $650,000,000 in gold, incurred by the head of the Confederation, it is scarcely likely that King WILLIAM and his advisers would interpose any very formidable obstacles in the way of such a step.

What is a colt? People generally suppose that it is a young horse—under two years, certainly. He is first a colt, then a "yearling," then a two-year-old, and so on. But at Fashion Course on Thursday, Mr. BONNER'S Jo. Elliott was tried for a mile, and his performance is described in all the journals as being "wonderful for a colt." We look for his age, and find that he is five years old. The question is, when will this colt be a horse?

Collisions at Sea—Legislation Required.

The dangers arising from collisions at sea have very largely increased both in number and in the damages which they cause, in these later years. The English Wreck Register for 1865 gave the number of collisions in the seven previous years as 2,344, which is nearly one for every day in the year. Twenty-five years ago it would have been almost an impossibility for any collision to have caused damages equal to that caused by the sinking of the steamer Scotland and the ship Kate Dyer off Fire Island. The loss by that collision alone was probably $750,000. We think it is a low estimate to say that the value of property lost in the collisions which have come before our Admiralty Courts in the port of New-York within the past year, is over a million and a half of dollars.

It is natural that this increasing peril and loss should have called for much consideration from those who go down to the sea in ships; and in 1862 the English authorities, after much consultation on the part of the Board of Trade, the Lords of the Admiralty and the Trinity Brethren, with the aid of the best professional assistance that could be procured, promulgated a set of sailing rules, for the purpose of avoiding collisions at sea. Those rules were afterward passed in the form of a statute by Congress and adopted by almost every maritime nation, and they have therefore become, as was held in the case of the Scotia, the Law of the Sea.

Those rules, thus having been made law, became immediately the subject of construction by the Courts. The Admiralty Judges have to apply them in every case of collision at sea which comes before them. Sitting without a jury to aid them, they have not only to find out the facts which actually occurred, from testimony which is proverbial as being more contradictory than in any other class of cases; they have to familiarize themselves with the nomenclature of the sea and the laws of correct navigation, and they have to apply to the facts of the different cases, as ever varying as the waves which bear the vessels, these rules which were prepared so as, if possible, to meet all cases. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that the rules and the decisions of Courts of Admiralty on them have been the subject of much discussion. This has been especially so in England.

We have before us a copy of "Correspondence concerning the Rule of the Road at Sea, &c.," which arose out of suggestions made to the British Board of Trade and to the Admiralty from various quarters, that some alterations were needed in the rules to make them clear, especially in the eleventh and thirteenth articles of the regulations, which provide as to what should be done when ships are meeting "end on, or nearly end on." The writers declared that a misapprehension seemed to prevail among seamen in reference to the rules, so that their observance tended largely to cause collisions; that seamen appeared to understand that whenever they saw a light ahead, or nearly so, they were required by law to port their helm, whereby they often ran into vessels which were crossing their track, and which they could have escaped by a different manœuvre; and it was stated that this error on the part of seamen was caused by the action of the Admiralty Courts, which had apparently given that construction to the rules. Hence arose, on the one hand, these suggestions that the rules ought to be altered, and there are published three different forms of rules, which were suggested to the Board of Trade as improvements upon the rules as they then stood. That Board, on the other hand, took up the cudgels in defence of the rules as they were, showed that they were drawn up with much consideration, that they had been adopted as they were by the maritime nations of the world and ought not to be lightly altered, at least without some consultation with the chief maritime Powers, and they claimed that the difficulty, if there was one, was not in the rules, which were clear enough in themselves, but in the fact that they were not obeyed. The Secretary of the Board, Mr. GRAY, prepared a little pamphlet called "Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea," which seems to us well calculated to put clearly into the minds of seamen what the law required of them to do in regard to other vessels. Besides his pamphlet, he prepared "The Rule of the Road, being Aids to Memory, in four Verses," which was also reported to Parliament.

The Board of Trade went further than the pamphlet and the poetry, which, indeed, they did not officially indorse. They prepared a catechism for mariners on the rules, in which they were to be examined if they would be mates or masters, which was adopted also by the French Admiralty. But their opinion that no alteration of the rules was necessary or advisable was not concurred in by the other maritime authorities of England, and after consultation with the French authorities a new article was prepared by England, which, on July 30, 1863, was adopted by the Privy Council, and thus received the binding force of law in England. It has since been adopted also by Hamburg, Greece, Russia and Sweden, and substantially, though in briefer form, by France.

It has, therefore, become a question what the United States should do in the premises. We do not think that the misconception which seems to have led to the change in England, has ever prevailed here. It will be difficult, we think, to see in what respect our Admiralty Courts have laid down any different rule from that which is contained in this explanatory article. But it is so important, now that the maritime nations should remain agreed upon regulations which shall be the law of the sea as that they should have a agreed upon them in the first place. We cannot see any [illegible] of the explanatory article, and [illegible] so that will be lost in incorporating it into the rules which we have adopted.

Italian Opera.

DONIZETTI'S well-known opera of "Linda di Chamounix" afforded an opportunity last night for the reluctance of Miss KELLOGG, and her Signor RONCONI to appear in one of those original characters in which he first made his great reputation. The audience surpassed that of the opening night in brilliancy as well as numbers, and the performance was in some respects a more finished and satisfactory one. Miss KELLOGG has rarely sung or acted, to our knowledge, with better effect. Her opening aria, "Oh, Luce di Guest Anima," showed that she was in fine voice and spirits, and the magnetic influence of him who is still the "great RONCONI" seemed to inspire her to the utmost point of her histrionic capacity. The duet with Carlo (Herr HABELMANN) was managed with much delicacy and fire, and the pathos and earnestness of Signor RONCONI, admirably seconded by all concerned, brought the curtain down on the first act amid spontaneous and hearty applause.

No sketch is needed for opera goers, or indeed for theatre goers, of the story that gives abiding passion and tenderness to "Linda di Chamounix" and brings its lesson home to every feeling heart. The tale is the same as that of HOWARD PAYNE'S "Clari," and is wrought up by much the same situations and accessories. It would hardly be possible to conceive a heroine for such a drama, more graceful, more delicate or, upon occasion, more impassioned than Miss KELLOGG last evening showed herself able to be. Her youth, her person, her facile vocalization are all in her favor for such parts, and she uses her advantages with conscientious fidelity. It is possible to conceive her Linda, a maiden innocent, trusting, absorbed in a mighty love, yet so tenacious of her native purity as to become overwhelmed with desperation at the bare thought of her betrayal. The character was well chosen for this gifted young lady's reappearance, and we are glad to be able to record her deserved success in it. Herr HABELMANN sang the music of Carlo with care and sweetness. His action is mechanical and he lacks the quality, for which there is no English equivalent, of abandon. Nevertheless his performance was a good one, and his singing was sometimes excellent. We regretted to observe a repetition of the faults that marred Signor REYNA'S first appearance, and which seem to us by some fatality provokingly at variance with his real powers. The obstinate tendency to sing false may be in part the consequence of indisposition, and we shall gladly hope it is so until we have other opportunities to judge. Occasionally last night he was all that could be wished for, but the unevenness that marked "Il Conde de Luna" was too frequently observable in Il Prestito. Mme. CELLINI was acceptable in Pierroto, and Signor BARILI deserves the same praise in Il Marchese.

The magnificent acting of Signor RONCONI, especially in the latter parts of the opera, should receive more than the hasty attention that, writing at a late hour, we are able at present to bestow upon it. It is not often that an audience has the opportunity to enjoy so admirable an exhibition of the loftiest phase of the lyric art, and it is a pleasure to say that the public on this occasion appeared fully to appreciate the fact. "Linda" should be repeated as soon as possible. Its production is highly creditable to the artists and to Mr. MARETZEK. A great many operas are presented in a manner that is commonplace, some few in a manner that is commendable, but very few rise even at intervals to what without hyperbole may be called the sublime. Parts of the representation of "Linda" fairly ascended last night even to so exalted a plane; and we do not hesitate to put on record the opinion.

A matinée is given to-day at the Academy, when "Il Trovatore" will be sung with the successful artists, Mme. BRIOL and Signor LEFRANC, in the principal parts.

Theatrical.

MATINEES TO-DAY.

Besides the matinée to be given at the Academy of Music, this day, we notice that afternoon entertainments at almost all the other City theatres may be attended. LOTTA'S first après midi entertainment is to be given at Niblo's; the two farewell performances of "The Streets of New York" are to take place at the Olympic, and so on. We observe, too, that the last day representation of "She Would and She Would Not" is to occur at the Fifth-avenue Theatre. With the very sensible intention of affording out-of-town playgoers an opportunity of witnessing this comedy, Mr. DALY will see that its interpretation ends by 4:30 o'clock.

Musical Notes.

MASON BROTHERS have disposed of their catalogue of music books to OLIVER DITSON & Co. for over $100,000. This is the largest sale of musical works ever made in this country. The Mason catalogue numbers upward of seventy books, many of them of wide popularity.

THE PACIFIC RAILWAYS.

Their Influence in Commercial, Political and Social Life—The Mormon and Indian Questions Settled by Them—The Kansas Pacific.

It is about time for us to look over our Pacific Railway investments, and see what we have done, what remains to be done, and what lessons the experience may teach us. There was a rippling sensation in home and foreign money markets some time since in reference to Pacific Railway securities, but it has died away. The desperate ventures of the gold gamblers in Wall-street shriveled up our private credit abroad without effecting that of the Government. Eris experiences and manipulation have made foreign investors as tender and dainty about American railroad bonds as SIDNEY SMITH was wont to be about Pennsylvania obligations. It was also feared by some of our own people that Congress had spent too much money,—that we had made a reckless bargain, and that the interests of the country had been abandoned in the eager rush for territory and subsidies and termini. There is no perceptible trace of that anxiety remaining, for Summer has done well, and it is hoped Winter will not be a disappointment. Much of our early Pacific legislation was mere guesswork—we were in the dark, and strongly governed by our imagination and geographical recollections. When people talked of the Rocky Mountains, it was almost with terror, for these mountains covered a hidden, forbidding land, as repelling as Othello's fancied journeyings. Men thought of it as of ——"Centres vast and deserts idle;

Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch Heaven,
And of the cannibals that each other eat,
The anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders."

These were mere geographical difficulties, however, and like difficulties generally, they melted before the resolute energy of builders and craftsmen. Dangers sank into the mists, and the Rocky Mountains became as harmless and attractive as our modest Catskills. The roads seemed to glide along and link in happy union before we felt they were fully under way. And now that we look back we feel that it was worth as much as was spent to bind the two oceans, and achieve the inestimable and political advantages which have followed. There are enterprises that deserve to rank in history with the most famous achievements of war—and worthy of a brighter lustre than Blenheim, and Waterloo and Gettysburg. A bridge, or a canal, or a dyke, or a railway, or a telegraph, are in themselves commonplace and homely, but nations have more effectually reached true comfort and prosperity by their aid than by conquest. The decade that gave us these great railways has seen a happy and appropriate comparison achievement in the Isthmus of Suez Canal. With eager, resolute men, wandering over peninsula, and isthmus, and stream and mountain, looking for other canals to dig and other roads to build, we may hope for still greater triumphs. Already Pacific Railways have solved two painful and exasperating problems—the "Mormon question" and the "Indian question." There was an end of them, when LELAND STANFORD drove his golden spike into the connecting rail on Promontory Heights. What threatened to be an aggressive political element in its social arrangements, for BRIGHAM YOUNG, with the Federal army within ten days of his dominions, possessed [illegible] than the leader of a savage people. As for the Indians, we are channeling his hunting grounds, and plastering corn in his bullet marks, and every day Cheyenne and barbarous HOME must soon feel that this is the age of the plow, and not of the tomahawk.

These are moral and political considerations, but what do we see in the way of business? The Pacific roads are the Kansas Pacific—running from Kansas City to Denver, (incomplete,) the Central Pacific, running east from the Pacific Ocean, and the Union Pacific, running west from the Missouri River. They are three lines serving the same purpose—railway communication between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. The Union runs from Omaha for 1,031 miles. It bears a Government lien and mortgages of $27,232,000, or an average of $26,170 per mile. During the month of September its earnings were in round numbers $750,000—a profit of $692 per mile. In addition to this the Company sold in Nebraska lands to the value of about $200,000. The Central runs 690 miles. It is the only line leading out of California. It bears a Government mortgage and lien of $48,320,000, or an average of $70,000 per mile. Its earnings in September were $647,870, or $924 per mile. The Kansas Pacific bears a Government mortgage and lien of $32,000 per mile, and when it reaches Denver, which will probably be in the Spring, they will amount to $29,000 per mile. Its earnings in September were $240,000, or $650 per mile. All of this shows marked and unusual prosperity, especially in the Kansas line, whose managers have manifested great enterprise, and an economy which should be commended whenever we see it in railway business. The aid which its builders received was not more than one-half of that given to the Union, and two-fifths of that loaned to the Central. Taking the proportion of earnings to the amount of mortgage on the Kansas line as shown by the September exhibit, the Central should have earned $1,328 per mile instead of $924, and the Union should have earned $1,060 per mile instead of $692. To properly understand this statement, we must also remember that the Kansas line has at present no terminus, but swing out in the open plain, and, therefore, these earnings are merely its gains from local business.

The success of these Pacific lines should go far toward strengthening that feeling of confidence with which foreign investors are beginning to treat our first-class railway securities. The gamblers' panic has done its mischief so far as they are concerned, and died away. A good loan like good wine needs no bush; and these great roads, with their princely endowments, the guarantee and aid of the Government, and the rapid clustering of wealth and population along their lines, are as trustworthy as it is reasonable to expect any human investment to be. We feel more assured in this opinion when we see our most eminent financiers, bankers and merchants of high repute sustaining them with their capital and developing them with their great ability and experience. Mr. CISCO manages the finances of the Union Pacific, FISK & HATCH the Central; JAY COOKE will soon bring us the Northern Pacific; M. K. JESUP & Co. and DABNEY, MORGAN & Co. are now placing the Kansas Pacific, and selling the bonds to complete the Denver extension. These are among the Kings of the Street—real monarchs, whose sceptres are honor, and whose crowns are true gold; and the country should applaud the zeal and resolution they have shown in their patriotic work. The Kansas Railway is a step to the Pacific by the Southern route, through New-Mexico and Arizona and along the thirty-fifth parallel. Such a road is an absolute necessity. On this line the snow rarely falls. It is the country of the Aztec and the early Spaniard; with towns older than New-York or Boston; a prosperous, thrifty people; boundless mineral and agricultural resources, and traverses the regions where Spanish adventurers in early days gathered the wealth which founded many a gaudy and dazzling house in Castile and Aragon.

Whether this road can be built without Government aid or not remains to be seen. If such aid should be necessary, it will be upon the basis of the $29,000 a mile given to the Kansas line, not the $63,000 and $76,000 bestowed upon the Central and the Union. The Kansas people are building their line without further aid—which shows faith, and a faith we are happy to see fully justified by the results. The managers have met their obligations by paying to the Government, in interest, a sum greater by one-third than that paid by all the other companies—six times as much as that paid by the Central, for instance, a road which has received four times as much in bonds. Nor is this surprising when we reflect on the majestic career of Kansas—its rapid increase in wealth and population—the great fertility of its lands, and the rapidity with which it marches to the dignity and grandeur of "The Massachusetts of the West." The completion of the Kansas Road to Denver and its connection with Cheyenne—now a busy Winter's work—make it practically an important branch of a through line to the Pacific, as well as the beginning of a great Southern trunk line. Such a line must soon be built out of the range of disheartening snows and storms, and we incline to the opinion that it cannot have a better route than the thirty-fifth parallel.

Discussion on Co-operation.

The Association for the Advancement of Science and Art had a meeting last evening at Cooper Institute, at which there was a lengthy discussion on the subject of "Coöperation, or by what means can Labor be secured its greatest Reward?" Mr. WM. B. SCOTT presided, and in a few words contended that cheapness and dearness are money prices, and afford no criterion by which to judge of the value of things to nations; that there are interests in the human mind of an antagonistic nature, and that what a man or nation would not fight to gain, or guard when gained, should not be envied.

Mr. ROOSEVELT, in reply, argued that the science of government was the science of coöperation, and although no Government was ever quite effectual, yet a Government was better than nothing at all. People, he believed, thought too much of the present rather than the future, and first looked to personal gain, forgetting that less selfishness on their part would be more to the benefit of all. An army will act the better when each soldier does his best for the benefit of all, and not for his own private purposes. Money ruled the world, and when it was the self-interest of men to do what was just for all, then, he believed, the millennium would have arrived.

Mr. JOHN D. DISTURNELL was in favor of coöperation, and followed by its effects in various parts of Europe that it had been a great benefit, not only to people, but to cities, and, as an instance of this, he enumerated the many advantages conferred on Como, in Italy, by means of such societies.

Mr. DUGDALE was in favor of coöperation, inasmuch as it tended to infuse a spirit of economy into the workingmen. Where mats purchased in a coöperative establishment they thus coöperated and combined together, got articles at proper value, and received periodically a portion of the profits of the concern. But the great drawback was the elective principle, and he believed that to have been the reason of the ruin of many a coöperative institution.

Mr. THURBER, Mr. STAATS, Dr. STELLY, and others, followed, after which the meeting adjourned.

The Wiard Boiler at the American Institute Exhibition.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your notice of the proceedings of the American Institute on Thursday evening you refer to the statement of Mr. NORMAN WIARD, that I had used to his detriment my position as Superintendent of their late exhibition. The facts are that Mr. WIARD put up a boiler in the exhibition, which he proposed to use in such manner that it was liable to explode unless his attachment prevented its doing so. As his attachment depended for its action upon automatic arrangements which had been found unreliable in other cases, I could not hold myself responsible for the safety of the thousands who daily visited the exhibition. I so reported to the Board of Managers, who imposed certain restrictions upon Mr. WIARD, and appointed a committee to investigate the subject. The members of the committee failing to agree and report, the restriction was kept up during the entire exhibition.

Very truly yours,
CHAS. E. EMERY,
Sup't American Institute Exhibition of 1869.

A Word for Life Insurance.

Too little importance is generally ascribed to the beautiful and efficient science of life insurance by the generous of the responsible public. Although for the last ten years it has been rapidly growing into favor through the endeavors of that active and energetic class of men, its insurance agents, still, the amounts of insurance effected in this country is to [illegible] drop in a bucket of water. [illegible] if the people, in general, [illegible] as to the [illegible] of life insurance, and [illegible] abilities and economies, and devote an hour of their leisure time to, what might be of more importance to them near and dear to them than wealth—the [illegible] of the ordinary business of life.

The Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Company was organized in 1851. During its active career it has never had cause to be content in claim. Rapidly increasing in business and popularity—its premium receipts being over $1,300,000 in 1867, against less than $200,000 in 1858, and issued 5,796 policies in 1867, against about 1,600 in 1858, we consider it one of the safest and best companies transacting business in this City, and would advise parties desiring to insure to call at their branch office, No. 185 Broadway, under the charge of Mr. JOHN E. DE WITT, resident director.—Evening Press.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

SUNDAY EDITION.

The Sunday edition of the NEW-YORK TIMES has long been regarded as one of the best Sunday papers published in this City. It contains not only the very latest news by telegraph and mail from all points of interest in our own and foreign countries and the freshest local intelligence, but a variety of miscellaneous reading matter, original and selected, which renders it a literary as well as a news journal of interest and value. It still is, as it always has been, the aim of its conductors to admit nothing in its columns which can in the least offend the taste or good judgment of the refined, who justly object to the low sensationalism which has become the feature of too many journals.

The TIMES of to-morrow, (Sunday,) Nov. 7, will contain, among other things, an article entitled:

THE MONEY MART:

A sketch of Wall-street and its surroundings; the street in the olden time and now; an insight into the manœuvres of brokers; irregular bank transactions; the "lingo" of the street explained; how to go in and when to get out; the stock and gold exchange; the great panic; some fortunes made and lost.

Also, with selections from the current literature, a story entitled "A NARROW ESCAPE;"

Letters from our own correspondents abroad; notes about the stage and its people; editorial articles and paragraphs on live topics, &c., &c.

As an advertising medium the Sunday TIMES is valuable. It circulates largely among the most intelligent class whom advertisers most desire to reach. Advertisements intended for insertion in this edition must be sent in to the TIMES Publication Office as early on Saturday evening as possible to insure proper classification.

NEW-YORK TIMES FOR EUROPE.

The EUROPEAN EDITION of the NEW-YORK TIMES is published THIS MORNING, and may be had at the counter of the publication office, in wrappers, ready for mailing. Price FIVE CENTS.

It will contain a full digest of news from all parts of the United States up to the latest moment, with such selections from the editorials and correspondence of the TIMES as may have interest for Americans residing abroad and for European subscribers.

Among other features of interest are presented the following:

Political Affairs of the Country, Domestic Correspondence, General Telegraphic News, Scientific Notes, Religious Affairs, Temperance Items, Local News, Washington Advices, General News, &c.

In this City, [illegible] cold is easily taken, and [illegible] one another, be contracted on [illegible] and [illegible] another, until the [illegible] of which [illegible] tion and weakness, [illegible] and [illegible] by the [illegible] class, yet notwithstanding a majority of [illegible] of clearly-defined pulmonary disease may [illegible] be accounted for, thousands are now carelessly [illegible] themselves to drift through the preliminary symptoms, under the fatal delusion that they are [illegible] with "nothing but a cold." How obvious is it, therefore, that a cold should be carefully cared for from its inception, and every exertion used to rid the system of its effects? Coughs and colds, pulmonary, bronchial and asthmatic affections, are readily cured by that standard preparation, Dr. D. JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT, and by promptly resorting to it, all fears of dangerous results will soon be dissipated. Sold everywhere.

PREPARE FOR EXAMINATION!
A Resume of the Entire History of the World, in all its phases, political, religious, literary, scientific and social, is to be found in the
TO-MORROW.
It portrays with wonderful force the workings of the master passions of human nature, good and evil, and is entitled,
PERDITA;
OR,
FAIR AND FALSE.
The author is FAIRFAX BALFOUR, one of the most vigorous and popular of that new order of novelists, the freshness and boldness of whose style has thrown the drawlers of the old school completely into the shade. His stories already published, among which may be mentioned "Nellie; or, The Companions of the Chain," "Three Women," "Ida; or, The Pearl of Rock Cliff," &c., have obtained a wide celebrity, but in the opinion of competent critics who have read this latest production of his genius in manuscript, it far surpasses them all. The whole of the
ADVANCE SHEETS
having now been received from London, in fulfillment of a costly contract made with the author before the work was completed, the first installment, as already stated, will appear in the NATION'S SUNDAY NEWSPAPER
of to-morrow. By this arrangement the distinguished novelist secures a copyright price for the offspring of his brain, on this side of the Atlantic, and has the advantage of being read simultaneously in the Old World and in the New, as well as of obtaining a fair compensation for his mental labor from both hemispheres.

Fairfax Balfour belongs to that brilliant and powerful class of imaginative writers, the great merit of whose stories consists in graphic delineations of character, admirably conceived plots, striking situations and incidents, rapid and continuous action, and the absence of those tedious digressions, which, like the long pauses between the acts of a play, are universally regarded as nuisances in this stirring, wide-awake age. In these respects he takes rank with Charles Reade and Miss Braddon, while in the skill he evinces in provoking curiosity, piling mystery upon mystery, and happily unraveling the web of wonders, he so cunningly weaves, he resembles Wilkie Collins. So far each one of his novels has been an improvement on the preceding, and, beyond question, "PERDITA; OR, FAIR AND FALSE," both in its conception and execution is the best he has ever written.

This story opens on a foggy, starless night, in a tumble-down old hut, in a squalid suburb of London, a sort of amphibious abode built of old ship timbers, amid the mud and ooze of a creek running into the Thames. The inhabitants of the hovel are a rough, sinister-looking fellow of Herculean proportions, and a fragile little girl, some 7 or 8 years old, intelligent beyond her years, but utterly destitute of moral feeling and of every natural attribute of childhood, except beauty. The man is a tinker by profession, and a general depredator in practice. A "pal" of the tinker enters the hut; a burglary is planned; and on the next night the two ruffians and the child set out through the fog and darkness on their desperate enterprise. The child is introduced into the garden of the mansion they intend to plunder, and subsequently into the dwelling itself, the door of which she opens and admits her confederates. They are discovered in the act of entering by the master of the house, Sir Walter Arvenel. The tinker is shot through the heart, his accomplice escapes and the little girl remains a prisoner in the hands of Sir Walter and his servants. Nothing can be more vivid and exciting than the manner in which the scene in the hovel, the night tramp to the place of rendezvous, the stealthy raid upon the premises and the rencontre in which the child's protector falls are described. Sir Walter Arvenel and his lady become greatly interested in their little captive. They adopt her and give her the name of PERDITA. She grows up a miracle of beauty, and in as perfidious as she is beautiful, a Mephistopheles in petticoats. In her varying fortunes and the adventures, mystifications, jealousies and crimes incident to her wild and terrible career centres the chief interest of the story. PERDITA is at once the star of fashionable society and the heroine of low life—playing a double part—unsuspected by her patrician friends—with the most consummate skill and subtlety. Fair as false, and false as fair, she enamores whom she will, makes men her tools and play things, and under the cloak of apparent simplicity and candor outwits the sharpest of her sex. Wherever she makes her acquaintance in Fairfax Balfour's fascinating story is morally certain to accompany the beautiful enchantress to the end of the final chapter of her strange, eventful history, which assuredly has no parallel in the world of fiction, and is, nevertheless she is no fanciful impossibility, but a living entity; and although the reader may have never met with her fac simile in real life, he will admit that the "right side" of human nature exhibited in the character is still human nature. Nothing human is all evil, and the novelist has not left the deep shadows of Perdita's moral depravity without here and there a light—has not placed her absolutely beyond the pale of reclamation. Hence, there seems to be room for a hope that she may in the end be "a brand snatched from the burning;" but as it is not the purpose of this sketch to anticipate the developments of the story, no clue will be given to her ultimate fate. No story reader cares to be told in advance how the tale that interests him is to end; and, as there is no "foolish" to be "skipped" in the intensely interesting narrative, and every chapter strengthens the fascination which it exercises over the imagination from the very beginning, it would be inexcusable, while thus bespeaking attention to its prominent features, to disclose the finale.

A greater variety of characters, both in high and low life, is probably not to be found in any modern romance. Every dormant passion of humanity has its embodied representative in the story, and in place of the automatism figures that stalk through the pages of commonplace fiction, the author brings us in contact with genuine men and women, good or bad people of Sybaris have curious which might be copied by Americans with profit. These are described with a humor peculiarly Mr. HALE'S own, which made "The Ingham Papers," and the stories of "If, Yes and Perhaps" so readable."—Cincinnati Chronicle.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

There was a very fair attendance at the Salesroom yesterday. But two sales were made, amounting in all to $63,490. The four-story house and lot, No. 20 Park-avenue, sold for $53,000. The other sales were unimportant.

To-day the auctioneers and regular attendants will have an interval of rest; no sales will be attempted, and the echoes of the cheerful basement will not be disturbed.

On Tuesday next, 11th inst., Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER have quite an extensive sale of Brooklyn property consisting of fifty valuable building lots, being part of the block bounded by East New-York and Utica avenues and Furnald-street. East New-York-avenue is the principal thoroughfare leading to the grand southeasterly entrance of Prospect Park. The property to be sold is located within 15 minutes' drive of the South ferries, over one of the finest avenues in the United States, viz., Union-st., which is paved with Nicolson pavement and runs direct from the ferry through Prospect Park, thereby bringing the property almost at the doors of New-York City. The grades are good and the property as desirable for investment at any now in the market. Many wealthy capitalists from New-York and Hartford, Conn., have made large purchases in the vicinity.

Also, at same time and place, the balance of the property situated at Great Neck, L. I., formerly belonging to Hon. BENJAMIN WOOD, consisting of 150 desirable lots. All of the above property will be sold absolutely regardless of price. Maps and particulars at the office of JOHNSON & MILLER, No. 25 Nassau-street, New-York.

The same day Messrs. WYCKOFF & LITTLE have a sale of ninety-five lots in the Ninth Ward, Brooklyn, at Flatbush and Fulton avenues and McDonough-street. Maps and particulars are now ready at the auctioneers' offices, Nos. 74 Cedar-street, and 151 Montague-street, Brooklyn.

The same day Messrs. E. H. LUDLOW & Co. will, by order of WM. LAIMBEER and ZACHARIAH FREDERICK, executors of JEREMIAH CARHART, deceased, sell the three-story, basement, and sub-cellar brick high-stoop house and lot, No. 216 East Nineteenth-street, south side, near Third-avenue; house, 20.6 by about 58 feet; party walls both sides; lot 20.6 by 98.9. $10,000 may remain on bond and mortgage for three or five years. Also, at the same time, by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of J. L. LEFFERTS, referee, the valuable extra large lot with building known as No. 156 Duane-street, south side, between West Broadway and Hudson-street, being 24 feet front, 46.6 rear, 125.2 in depth, and having a frontage on Hudson-street.

Other interesting sales will be made during the week, particulars of which will be given hereafter.

JOHN

The Utica Observer claims for GARRETT SANFORD, the Democratic candidate for Senator in the Nineteenth District, a majority of eight votes. Five of these votes were cast for GARRETT H. SANFORD.

Hon. CHARLES J. FOLGER, Republican, re-elected Senator in the Twenty-sixth District, ran about 300 ahead of his ticket in Ontario County.

The Argus claims thirteen majority for WILLIAM D. MURPHY, the Democratic candidate for Member of Assembly in the First District of Albany County.

The member of Assembly in the Second District of Delaware County is now conceded to the Democrats. This is a Republican loss. CHARLES H. ALLAIRE, the candidate elected, was formerly a member of the Senate.

MORGAN P. BREWER is reflected to the Assembly from the Third District of Chautauqua County, by 575 majority over Dr. F. B. BREWER, the independent Republican candidate. He had 266 majority in his own town, and carried all but three or four towns in his district.

The Albany Argus claims 25,000 majority for NELSON, and a larger majority in the balance of the Democratic State ticket. It also claims eighteen Senators, conceding the election of the Republican candidate in the Thirty-first (the Erie) District.

The majority for WILLIAM M. GRAHAM, the Democratic candidate for Senator in the Tenth District is about 500.

The Ogdens Republican says that ANSON S. WOOD, Republican, is elected to the Assembly from the First District of Wayne County.

Our list of Assemblymen elect, corrected by the later returns, gives the Democrats a majority of sixteen, there being fifty-six Republicans and seventy-two Democrats.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

Offices to be Filled—The Ring Candidates.

The State election is over, and the "Ring" have swept the board. They have elected every candidate they put in nomination with the exception of two Assemblymen, and one of these—Mr. COSTA, of the Ninth District—they will doubtless cheat out of his place when it comes to the official count. They have done even better than last year, for at that election three candidates for the Assembly were successful who ran in opposition to the Tammany nominees. It is not strange, therefore, that the "Ring" feels stronger than ever, and that, with the aid of a Democratic Legislature to shape legislation in accordance with their wishes, they consider themselves firmly established in power for an indefinite time to come.

The next move to be made on the Tammany chess board is for the Ring to make up a "slate" for the municipal election to come off on the first Tuesday of next month. The prizes to be won at this contest are not less valuable than those at stake in the election just past. Under the new law reorganizing the Board of Aldermen, there are twenty-one of these functionaries to be elected, instead of seventeen, as heretofore, which, together with twenty-one Assistant Aldermen, make up a list of forty-two fat berths of $4,800 salary each, besides "jobs" and stealings, which, in the hands of Democrats, will amount to at least three times as much more.

Then there are nine Police Justices and nine Civil Justices to be elected, with salaries of $5,000 a year each, and six years' term of office. This makes a list of sixty offices to be filled at the December election, for each of which there are not less than a dozen Tammany fossils, who have equal claims to the favor of the "Ring." Under these circumstances it would seem a difficult task to make up a slate that shall command the acquiescence of the disappointed aspirants and their friends; but the "Ring" are accustomed to difficult tasks, and they will, no doubt, perform this one as successfully as the Hibernian murmuring from the disaffected as heretofore. Implie it obedience to the decrees of SWEENY, TWEED and CONNOLLY is now the cardinal article in the faith of St. Tammany. To rebel against them, or to question their justice or wisdom, is a mortal sin, to be followed by excommunication and eternal political damnation.

The movements and consultations of the Ring triumvirate for the coming week, will, therefore, be watched with eager interest by the politicians, far surpassing that with which the faithful will look for the deliberations of the Ecumenical Council.

The following list of Ring candidates for Aldermen and Assistant Aldermen will afford the readers of the TIMES a forecast of the December slate, and, although it may not prove entirely correct, it will be found to be as near the truth as one not in the full confidence of the Ring is competent to prepare.

Dist.	Aldermen.	Assistant Aldermen.
1.	John Mooney.	John Healey.
2.	Thomas Coman.	Patrick Lysaght.

POLICE AND CIVIL JUSTICES.

A good share of the present Police and Civil Justices, as of the Aldermen and Assistant Aldermen, will be renominated. The slate is not yet fully decided upon, but the following new men have the inside track for the nomination:

Alderman MCQUADE for Police Justice in the Ninth (new district,) and JOSIAH PORTER, ex-member of the Assembly, for Police Justice; JOHN SCOTT for Police Justice in the Fourth District, and ANTHONY HARTMAN, ex-member of the Assembly, for Civil Justice; THOMAS PITMAN for Civil Justice in LEDWITH'S district; WILLIAM H. TRACEY for Civil Justice in the Fifth District, in place of LOEW, elected to the Common Pleas Court; J. WARREN POWLES for Civil Justice in DODGE'S district.

There will doubtless be other changes, but the above are all that are regarded as certain at the present writing.

The Vote in the Fourth Senatorial District.

The result of the canvass in this district, the only one from which full returns did not come on the night of the election, has at length been made known, and shows an overwhelming majority for TWEED. Both GOULDING and BORST having withdrawn from the contest, BENJAMIN MILLS was placed in the field at the eleventh hour.

FOURTH SENATE DISTRICT.

FOR SURROGATE.

Hutchings.....30,732 | Dayton.....30,330

Second Assembly District.

The result of the election as regards the choice of a member of Assembly in the Second Assembly District of Westchester County, seems to be uncertain for the present, the Democrats claiming to have the correct figures and the partisans of many candidates, which was celebrated on the town of East Chester by a grand demonstration on Thursday evening, on the other hand, the Republicans feel confident that their candidate, Mr. C. CALDY, has been elected by a majority of six. The definitive result will probably be known until about Tuesday next, when the Board of County Canvassers will meet and perform some close figuring in the matter.

THE WORKINGMEN'S UNION.

Address by Mr. Young in Regard to the Workingmen and Tammany Hall.

The Workingmen's Union assembled at No. 207 Bowery last evening, Mr. NELSON W. YOUNG presiding. The Committee appointed to act with the Arbeiter Union reported progress. The delegates from the paper stainers' organization stated that their trade was still on a "strike." They said that the "bosses," had combined against them, and that the "strike" had become a question whether labor shall be equal with capital or not. The delegates from the journeymen gilders' organization announced that their trade proposed to make a demand for an increase of wages to-day, being desirous of receiving thirty-five cents an hour, instead of thirty, the present price. If the demand is not acceded to the trade will stop work. Mr. JESSUP, Secretary of the Union, said that he had written to the Secretary of the Treasury in relation to the enforcement of the Eight-hour law among the laborers on the new Post Office building, but that he had, as yet, received no answer. He mentioned that it was asserted in the newspapers that a committee of three had been appointed at Washington to inquire into the matter, but that he had not yet been informed of their action. He also said that he had received a reply from Governor HOFFMAN, in relation to the appointment of workingmen at Randall's Island, in which the latter stated that he was unaware that he had any appointments to make in connection with the House of Refuge at Randall's Island, but that if such was the case, he would be happy to receive suggestions of names. The Corresponding Secretary was instructed to write to President GRANT in regard to work on the new Post Office building. Messrs. MURPHY, CAMPBELL and WELLES were appointed a Committee to ascertain how Governor HOFFMAN can be reached in the matter of appointments at Randall's Island. Messrs. ENNIS, FITZGERALD and LENNON were chosen as a Committee in selecting legal assistance to aid the Union in drafting bills to be presented to the next Legislature.

Mr. NELSON W. YOUNG subsequently made an address in reference to the position which he held before the public at the recent election. He claimed that he was nominated as the workingmen's candidate for Coroner, and that he ran as such, not pledging or binding himself to any political party. He said that the editor of a certain newspaper, purporting to be the workingmen's organ, approached him previous to the election, offering to secure him the Tammany nomination for Alderman in case he abandoned the contest for Coroner. He believed that he had received 20,000 majority at the late election, but that Tammany Hall had counted him out. He concluded by protesting against the misrepresentations recently made by the alleged workingmen's organ. The meeting subsequently adjourned.

Excitement in Brooklyn on the Vote for Sheriff—Another Mandamus Issued—The Friends of Cunningham Betting on the Final Result.

The excitement about the Brooklyn City Hall and Kings County Court House, yesterday, in regard to the result of the election on the vote for Sheriff evinces an amount of chagrin on the part of the calculating and dashing Democracy indicative of the fact that but for the decisive and wise conduct of the Police, in many of the polling places on election day, there would have been no trouble to borrow on the score of disappointment when the contest was over. Not all the calculations were checkmated, but a sufficient number of small schemes were upset to merely encourage still hopeful Democrats and friends of JOHN CUNNINGHAM to bet on the result as it is to be announced by the Board of County Canvassers. Honest electors irrespective of party, however, think that the figures as already announced are decisive in favor of the election of ANTHONY WALTER to the office of Sheriff. The Democrats claim that the majority for WALTER of 1,944 has been reduced by the correction of a mistake in the count in the Ninth District, Fifth Ward, giving CUNNINGHAM 200 more, and that the returns from the Ninth District in the Tenth Ward added 400 to CUNNINGHAM'S vote, making in all about 600 votes, still leaving WALTER with a majority of over 600. The Democrats next calculate largely upon the returns from the Fifth District in the Twenty-first Ward, and expect to get from that point sufficient to wipe WALTER out completely. This is their last hope.

To this end application was made to Judge GILBERT, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, to issue a writ of mandamus, ordering Captain LENNON, of the Forty-ninth Precinct, to deliver to the two Canvassers of the Fourth District, Twenty-first Ward, the ballot boxes which were abandoned by them on the evening of the election, because the police and citizens insisted upon being present at the counting of the vote. The counting of the vote in the district alluded to is not likely to add to CUNNINGHAM'S prospect of success, a fact which was, no doubt, apparent to the managers of the Democratic machine on the day of election, hence the objection to count the ballots in presence of the Police and citizens. The mandamus was issued, and, of course, the boxes are now delivereable at the polling place as soon as the Canvassers are ready to count them. The Democracy still hold out stoutly proclaiming that there are not figures enough to elect WALTER.

The election on Tuesday last will, if we may judge by past experience, be followed by a wonderful outcropping of new Hats. These will, for the most part, be found at the establishment of KNOX, No. 212 Broadway. No matter what the politicians may do, KNOX is sure to be the people's hatter. His calling and election are sure.
